NO NUKES!
September 2014: As the People’s Climate March brought some 400,000 people together in New York City, the Muste Institute and Times Up!, a local environmental action group, collaborated to hang a banner on the Muste building demanding the closure of the Indian Point nuclear plant.

MUSTE NOTES
News from the A. J. Muste Memorial Institute
VOL. 22, NUMBER 1
FALL 2014

By Hillel Schenker
Given the crisis-filled headlines coming out of the Middle East, the very existence of the Palestine-Israel Journal (www.pij.org) provides a unique ray of light and hope. Founded in 1994 as an independent quarterly by prominent Israeli and Palestinian journalists Victor

Palestine-Israel Journal: A Ray of Hope

Strengthening Nonviolence in Latin America

March 2014: Activists from across Latin America gathered at a five-day training for trainers in Quito, Ecuador, practicing exercises like “turn the blanket,” in which they must turn over a blanket without anyone stepping off it or using their hands; they then analyze the strategies and tactics used to accomplish the goal. Organized by War Resisters’ International with support from the Muste Institute’s International Nonviolence Training Fund, the event helped 25 participants develop their nonviolence training skills while laying the groundwork for a regional network of trainers.

Cygielman and Ziad AbuZayyad, today its office in East Jerusalem is one of the few places where Israelis and Palestinians come together in the same space to seek a nonviolent end to the occupation and a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

With Israeli and Palestinian co-editors, and a 32-member editorial board with an equal number from both peoples, PJJ devotes every issue to one of the central questions on the joint Israeli-Palestinian agenda, and it becomes a major resource for students, scholars, activists, opinion and decision makers in the region and around the world.

The theme of our October 2014 issue is “Natural Resources and the Arab-Israeli Conflict,” a key cause of conflict in the Middle East, but also a potential basis for cooperation and sustainability. Given the terrible violence and loss of lives this past summer, we added a section on “The Israel-Gaza Crisis: What comes next?”—a roundtable discussion between four Israelis and four Palestinians about the war and prospects for the future. We also held a very successful public conference in Jerusalem on both topics.

Previous issues included “Two-State Solution at the Crossroads: Obstacles

continued on page 2
We are grateful to former co-director Jeanne Strole for her many years of dedication and hard work for the Muste Institute, and we wish her all the best in her new endeavors.

Marj Swann: A Lifetime of Inspiration

Marjorie “Marj” Swann Edwin, who worked with many of the nonviolence movements in the U.S. over nearly eight decades, died in March 2014 at age 93. Marj was deeply engaged in social justice work throughout her life, including in the 1940s when she got involved in anti-war efforts; in civil rights struggles, starting with CORE in Chicago; and in the labor movement, as a volunteer organizer for the first inter-racial white-collar union in Washington, DC, representing department store workers. Marj was sentenced to six months in federal prison for civil disobedience in 1958 at the Omaha, Nebraska nuclear missile site protests, where A.J. Muste was also famously arrested. In 1960 Marj founded the New England Committee for Nonviolent Action with her then-husband, Robert Swann. (The Swann Fund at the Muste Institute was named in their honor.) Her many accomplishments don’t fit in this space—they are worthy of a book, which she had in fact been working on in recent years. Marj will continue to inspire us.

Palestine-Israel Journal (continued from page 1)

In April 2014 I came to New York and Washington, together with Palestinian Co-Editor Ziad AbuZayyad, to carry out a series of activities around “Advancing a Weapons of Mass Destruction Free Zone in the Middle East.” We believe that the U.S. government and civil society have key roles to play in advancing a nuclear free zone in our region, but that the topic is not on their agenda. So we organized an all-day conference in New York where 50 civil society activists, think tank experts, and UN diplomats had the rare opportunity to engage with Assistant Secretary for International Security and Nonproliferation Tom Countryman.

Our delegation included Egyptian Prof. Sameh Aboul-Enein, an expert on arms control and proliferation issues, and Israeli Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Shlomo Brom, a senior analyst at the Institute for National Strategic Studies (INSS), who during the conference pointed to the cover of our issue and quoted the slogan “Don’t Bomb – Talk!” In Washington we had a marathon meeting with congressional staffers, and in both cities we gave public talks sponsored by important civil society groups. Our presentations—each from our own perspective, but with a common agenda of promoting a Weapons of Mass Destruction Free Zone—clearly had a major impact on the people we met.

Since 2012 we are proud to partner with the A.J. Muste Memorial Institute, enabling us to receive tax-exempt contributions from U.S.-based donors, without whom we could not maintain and continue our activities.

You can read the Palestine-Israel Journal online at http://www.pij.org/. Or better yet, subscribe.

Defending the Earth

Western Shoshone activists and leaders approached the entrance to the Nevada Test Site and spoke with guards there in an annual walk-run event drawing attention to the nuclear tests carried out on Western Shoshone land at the test site and adjacent Yucca Mountain. The Muste Institute supported the Western Shoshone Cradle-to-Grave Radioactive Waste Awareness Project with a Social Justice Fund grant in February 2014. The Corporation of Newe Sogobia said the grant “provided us with the opportunity to reach out across the country, to build a network, and to tell the story of how nuclear waste from nuclear reactors and military installations eventually impacts the culture and lifeways of our Native people.”
Highlighting Prison Resistance

Participants engaged with an exhibition of cultural materials produced by incarcerated people and their allies at the September 2014 opening of “Self Determination Inside/Out” at Interference Archive in Brooklyn. A Social Justice Fund grant supported the exhibit and related film screenings, panel discussions, community dialogues and other public programs, all designed to spark dialogue about the history and future of grassroots resistance to the prison-industrial complex.

Building Pan-African Nonviolence

Representatives of grassroots social movements from 24 African countries came together for the Pan African Nonviolence and Peacebuilding Network meetings in Cape Town, South Africa, in early July 2014. The meetings were held in conjunction with the War Resisters’ International (WRI) conference “Small Actions, Big Movements: The Continuum of Nonviolence.” With help from a Social Justice Fund grant and Muste Institute sponsorship of WRI, the Network was able to greatly expand its ranks, strengthen its structure, and plan new actions and trainings.

Organizing Against Land Theft in Africa

In June 2014, Ogoni small-scale farmers gathered for a training organized by Movement for the Survival of the Ogoni People (MOSOP) in Rivers State, Nigeria. Their goal? To build effective nonviolent resistance to government land grabbing policies, so they can continue to provide for themselves and their families. Meanwhile, in Uganda, residents of rural Amuru District learned how to successfully use nonviolent tactics to protect their land rights, thanks to trainings coordinated by Solidarity Uganda. Grants from the Muste Institute’s International Nonviolence Training Fund (INTF) provided crucial support.

Engaging on Racism

The Race Circus Project creates spaces for group dialogue about racism, segregation and current relationships among Atlanta’s white, Black, Latino, and Asian residents. The makeShift Circus Collective used its first-ever grant, from the Social Justice Fund, to develop this project.

Celebrate 40 years of support for nonviolence and social justice. Please give generously today to the A.J. Muste Memorial Institute.
A.J. Muste Memorial Institute
339 Lafayette Street
New York, NY 10012

ESSAY SERIES ON NONVIOLENCE

#1: Martin Luther King, Jr. – America’s leading apostle of human dignity – Loving Your Enemies; Letter from a Birmingham Jail; Declaration of Independence from the War in Vietnam.

#2: Barbara Deming – the feminist connection to nonviolence – On Revolution and Equilibrium

#3: Henry David Thoreau – the original architect of resistance – On the Duty of Civil Disobedience

#4: Jessie Wallace Hughan – suffragist, peace activist, founder of the War Resisters League – Pacifism and Invasion; On Duelling

#5: Emma Goldman – fiery orator, anarchist, agitator for peace and liberation – Preparedness: The Road to Universal Slaughter; The Individual, Society and the State

#6: Rosa Luxemburg – courageous leader of Germany’s democratic socialist movement – Prison Letters

#7: A. J. Muste – foremost 20th Century Pacifist theorician and activist, minister, socialist – Who Has the Spiritual Atom Bomb?

#8: On Wars of Liberation – three essays on pacifist resistance to armament and political struggles, including analysis of Gandhi’s position

#9: Aldous Huxley – Twentieth Century visionary and sage – Writer – A Philosophy of Nonviolence

#11: Some Writings on War Tax Resistance – thoughts, poems, tales from resisters, including Juanita Nelson, Allen Ginsberg and Pete Seeger

#12: Sidney Lens – peace and labor activist, socialist, occasional political candidate – six articles spanning three decades on the state of the U.S. labor movement

#13: (Spanish) Martin Luther King, Jr. – Spanish language translation of Loving Your Enemies, Letter

#14: Jeannette Rankin – first woman in Congress, suffragist, pacifist – “Two Votes Against War” and Other Writings on Peace

#15: David McReynolds – longtime activist with the War Resisters League, Socialist Party presidential candidate – A Philosophy of Nonviolence

#16: War Tax Resistance

The Essays of A.J. Muste

IF YOU USE THIS FORM, SHIPPING IS FREE—SEND IN YOUR ORDER TODAY!

I am enclosing a tax-deductible contribution for the Muste Institute’s work promoting active nonviolence and social justice:

Pamphlets (total qty.) _______ x $2.00 each ($1.40 each for 20 or more) $________
Sampler Pack _______ x $20.00 (one each of all 13 available pamphlets) $________
The Essays of A.J. Muste _______ x $20.00 * $________
Peace Agitator _______ x $5.00 * $________
T-Shirts: (L)____ (XL)____ x $15.00 $________

TOTAL ENCLOSED $________

Please make check or money order payable to AJMML and send to:
A.J. Muste Memorial Institute
339 Lafayette St.
NY, NY 10012

________________________________________________________

* for bulk rates, contact the Muste Institute office

Wear Your Peace Shirt. Muste Institute t-shirts are black cotton with a four-color geometric design and the words: “There is no way to peace, peace is the way.” Available in large and extra large. Shirts are made in the U.S.A.

Printed on Recycled Paper

Newsletter Design: Judith Rew